4. Definitions

'eyes and ears' – many of our clients have vision loss or are fully blind and some also have the dual loss of vision and hearing. This means that communication is not only essential between people, it is also essential for the client to know what is around them. Descriptions such as where or which way they are going, who is also there, what other people are doing or saying, the mood, weather etc. are all essential parts of communication and provide choices over decision making for each client. Guides 4 Sight assistants act as 'eyes and ears' for our clients.

5. Compliance

For each client, we hold dear their individual needs, purpose and preferences and with respect we will support their independent journey.

We think of ourselves as enablers, for people to make their own choices and have control of their own journey. Our responsibility is to be the 'eyes and ears'.

We will endeavour to be continuously verbally descriptive (communication appropriate), providing information so that clients are informed as much as possible of what is happening around them at all times.

We will;

- Provide specific assistance to enable achievement of clients' goals and timeframes.
- Provide assistance as clients' 'eyes and ears' to enhance the clients independence.
- Encourage and support clients to be part of their community in whatever form that takes e.g. working, as a volunteer, out socially, completing daily tasks, exercise and enjoyment.
- Work with clients to find ways to overcome difficulties or barriers and find alternative creative ideas that will ensure clients maintain their dignity.
- Research to find out more information and share that information with clients.
- Be open, honest and always courteous and respectful.
- Respect clients' individual situation and circumstances.
- Ensure clients health and safety at all times.
- Protect each person's privacy and confidential information.
- Listen to feedback so we can review and/improve our services.
- Resolve problems as quickly as possible
- Give clients a service agreement document outlining our commitment and the role we will play in their journey in their preferred communication style.
- Sometimes we will need to discuss and make decisions together; however we will always respect clients decisions and encourage clients in their rights of freedom of expression, self-determination and decision making.

6. Community

We see our community as a place with a wealth of information, experiences and opportunity to share and engage with for our business and our clients.

We see our role to educate and advocate together with our clients in the general community and mainstream businesses to raise awareness of appropriate actions and responses to individual needs, always respectful of everyone's right to be part of an inclusive community.

7. Partners in Business

We respect our partners in business and their professional disciplines. We encourage and support other businesses who offer services even when those services are not specific to our client's needs. We will actively build and maintain open, communication to develop strong and long lasting working and personal relationships.

8. Staff and Volunteers

- We respect the skills and expertise of other employees and volunteers
- We respect individual differences, support and encourage our employees and volunteers so we can build a strong collaborative network.
- We respect the rights of employees and volunteers to privacy and confidentiality.
- We actively support health and safety in our workplace and our community
